Venue: St Pauls community room, Hahndorf

Day: Monday 20th October (once only)

DNA profiling has revolutionised forensic science since it was first used in 1986. Initially a big blood stain the size 10 cents was needed and the chance the DNA came from someone else was about 1 in 50,000. Now we can obtain DNA profiles from the tiniest pin prick and the chance another person shares the DNA type way more than 1 in a trillion.

The media is often reporting recent and historic cases 'solved' by DNA and now there are questions about ancestry databases being used. This talk will demystify what DNA profiling actually is, what a DNA profile tells about a person and what is possible into the future.
